Forecast For Northwest England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Sunday 12 Dec 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Remaining mild, dull and damp at first turning brighter later.

Today:
Largely cloudy with further outbreaks of drizzle rain first thing, possibly brighter across Cumbria. By lunchtime it will become brighter and drier from the south. Mild for all but windy along the coast. Maximum temperature 13 deg C (55 deg F).

Tonight:
Turning cloudier with some outbreaks of rain across the region for a time overnight. Breezy for all but very windy along the coast. Minimum temperature 3 deg C (37 deg F).

Monday:
Much brighter through the morning and dry. Possibly becoming cloudier from the south with some further rain in the evening. Much cooler. Maximum temperature 6 deg C (43 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Largely mild and cloudy throughout the week, dry much of the time but some patchy rain possible on Tuesday into Wednesday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.